Principal

As a principal at Green Building Services, Inc., Elaine brings a unique perspective to green building and sustainability initiatives. She represents, in her work and approach, the successful merger of the best of the interior design and architectural disciplines, materials specifications, and green building. Her multidisciplinary background and diverse project experience, which ranges from residential and commercial development to manufacturing and volume certifications, distinguishes her in the green building industry. She has extensive expertise in multi-tenant office buildings and assembly sites such as convention centers and sports arenas.

Elaine leads teams through the successful greening of their buildings and facilities management practices. By focusing on strategies that deliver the greatest value, Elaine consistently positions project teams to exceed their initial green building expectations. Her excellence as a communicator and results-driven focus keep projects teams on schedule, on budget and on target with their green building goals.

Elaine is a frequent speaker at national conferences and training seminars. She presents workshops on Commercial Interiors, Existing Buildings and corporate sustainability.

Elaine's work as a green building consultant and materials expert is underpinned by an unwavering commitment to improve the quality of occupants' working and living environment. She customizes training programs and charrettes to engage facility personnel, tenants and building owners in the operation and enjoyment of their high performing building and company culture. This passion, guided by her integrity, creativity and accessibility, characterizes Elaine's approach to green building.

Elaine was awarded the BetterBricks Award for Green Advocate in 2011.
